A VARIETY OF STORIES

The Lives Operating in Manchuria
Are Getting Into Closer Touch and Heavy Work May Be Expected

St. Petersburg, May 20.—The following despatch from General Kuroptkin to the Emperor, dated at Liao Yang, has been received here:

A detachment of Cossacks engaged a detachment of the Japanese advance guard on May 18th, north of Feng Wang Cheng in the mountainous district. The fight began in the morning and lasted until three o'clock in the afternoon. The Japanese were successfully dislodged from four positions extending over 15 miles. The pursuit of the Japanese was stopped at Dalianky, three miles north of Feng Wang Cheng. Our casualties were 6 Cossacks wounded, two horses killed and eight horses wounded. No trace of the enemy in the vicinity of Kinho was found as far as the road leading to Teagoo, which goes eight miles north of Feng Wang Cheng, or in the valley of the river from Samatsu to Duan Dian San on the road to the Duan San line. The squadron of Japanese cavalry which left Kuan Dian San on May 17th for Samatsu was repulsed by one of our patrols at Schuogo, twelve miles from Duan Dian San. The patrol retired without loss.

A Japanese infantry brigade, two thousand strong, advanced on May 15th towards Salits Seihudse, which was evacuated on May 18th.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—It is reported here that Gen. Kuroptkin commanded in person the army corps which checked the Japanese advance on Liao Cheng. The Japanese forces, estimated at some 25,000 in all, were advancing across the hilly country between Hai Cheng, on the railway line twenty miles north of New Chwang, and Muo Thei Ling, in a northerly direction, apparently with Liao Yang as their objective. The Manchurian cavalry kept the staff well informed of this movement and Kuroptkin personally directed the hasty throwing up of entrenchments in the direct line of their advance. The Japanese advanced guard came on these early on Monday morning and a sharp action ensued in which the enemy lost forty-three men besides a Maxim gun. Kuroptkin ordered an advance and drove the Japanese back, on their main force, who in turn retreated in an easterly direction towards their base at Feng Wang Chang. Only their superior mobility saved them from greater disaster. A Cossack brigade followed until the Japanese got in touch with the main army on Wednesday morning. The Russian casualties were slight.

New Chwang, May 20.—The reports of the Japanese retreat to Feng Wang Cheng are officially confirmed.

The Japanese numbering 20,000 men, came upon 32,000 Russians in a strong position on Monday, sixty miles west of Feng Wang Cheng. It being unsafe to risk a battle, the Japanese retired going on the 20th, with great rapidity. An unofficial Russian authority says: A pitched battle was not fought, but the retreat of the Japanese was considerable loss on both sides during the clash with the Cossacks harassing the flanks of the Japanese. The pursuit was checked when the main body of the Japanese was rejoined."

Shan Kuan, May 20.—News was received here today that a hard battle had been fought on Wednesday near Moton Pass where the Japanese advanced. It is hard to awaiting the result of the attack on Hai Cheng before racing on Liao Yang. The report received here stated that the Russians completely surrounded the Japanese who managed to cut their way through in the direction of Feng Wang Cheng, after most desperate fighting. The retreating Japanese are said to have been pursued by the Russian cavalry, who were greatly superior to the Japanese and did not give up the pursuit of the routed army until almost in front of the fortifications of Feng Wang Cheng. Definite news of the battle cannot be obtained, but the Japanese are said to have lost very heavily with all their guns and ammunition in their flight.

STAR

(Bulletin Correspondence).
Seeds has progressed very well this spring.

A slight fall of snow occurred on Wednesday morning. Further east the storm was much worse, delaying the out-going mail on the 18th.

The ice-creaking social which was announced for May 10th, has been postponed till the evening of May 24th. The committee of management are working hard to make this a success. If the weather be favorable, will, and if the weather be favorable, will, we have no doubt, succeed.

Mr. G. Richards, Presbyterian minister, attended the meeting of the Synod of British Columbia held at Edmonton last week. We are pleased to hear that the presbytery has reconsidered the resolution of Mr. Richards from this field to Macleod, and he will remain for the summer here.

Mr. Davis has resigned the position as teacher of Bloomfield school, as his health would not permit of his being so closely confined.

We are pleased to see Miss Fergu-sen at work in her school again after a week's illness. She and pupils celebrated Arbor Day by a general clean up of schoolroom and grounds.

Mr. Jno. Littlehills of Agricola, who passed through here on his way to the pastures at the head of a trail, with one horse or cattle had the misfortune to lose two head at Star. One was a valuable purebred Durham cow.

Civil Engineer Driscoll was up viewing the washout in the road west of the bridge and have the road repaired at an early date. As it stands now, it is dangerous for traffic at night.

Homestead Inspector McDermid was in town last week on his way east.

Mr. G. H. Marce of Edmonton has moved to his homestead for the summer. He intends breaking seventy-five acres this coming season.

Mr. Burkholder's little daughter has scarlet fever.

Miss B. Anderson of Manitoba, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. E. Holmes.

The Wanderer's Return

Special Correspondence of the Toronto Star.

Ottawa, May 13.—Sir Hibbert Tupper, M.P. for Pictou, Nova Scotia, dropped into the House of Commons this week on his way back from England to Vancouver, B.C., where he now resides. By this little attention on his part the pathetic emptiness of a chair which has yawned beside Mr. Borden all session was relieved and parliament was reminded that Sir Hibbert is still alive, drawing mileage and other emoluments. Canada would not seem homelike if there wasn't a Tupper on the country's pay roll.

However, that catastrophe is about to happen, for they do say that Sir Hibbert is going to withdraw from politics. Hereafter the law and the profits will claim all his energies. Even the comprehensive grasp of a Tupper can hardly succeed in maintaining the conditions under which Sir Hibbert holds his seat—to live more or less of the Dominion and represent the other. As matters stand Sir Hibbert is just four thousand miles from his constituency, and until thought, transference is an exact science, the County of Pictou will not be inclined to regard Sir Hibbert's continued candidature as a business proposition. This is the way we keep good men out of parliament. Canada is besotted with localism to the extent of preferring an average person on the spot to a superior person a whole continent removed. Sir Hibbert submits to the inevitable and refuses to lag superfluous on the stage.

The actors in great scenes do not always know when they are dead, but Sir Hibbert has no illusions. He is apparently the most important member of the opposition after Mr. Borden, and occupies when he is in the House the post of honor as the leader's designate. This seat was given him when hope still sprung in the Tupper breast. Sir Charles had retired at the height of an ungrateful country. The Conservative party had decided to unload all its Tupper stock. The mantle of Sir Charles fell on Mr. Borden and Sir Hibbert was let to uphold the Tupper traditions, to exert the Tupper influence and to be the real power behind the throne. His position at Mr. Borden's elbow was the one legacy of Sir Charles to his party, besides the rose-colored benediction that was printed in the newspapers. Somehow or other the calculation went wrong. Mr. Borden was not clay in the potter's hands. The party received Sir Hibbert's counsels with indifference. Sir Charles' dream of running the opposition by telegraph with a direct wire to Sir Hibbert's apartments at the capital, fell through. And Sir Hibbert proceeded to cultivate a distaste for his parliamentary duties. He remained a member, however, and at long intervals—generally on his way to or from a Privy Council case in London—he dropped in and went through the motions as a guaranteed fool in good faith. Still he could not help recognizing that he was out of tune with the assembly. His four hour speeches were delivered to empty galleries and vacant benches. It dawned upon him that the new parliament had arisen which knew not Joseph and didn't want to listen to him. In short, the Tupper method of long harangues and hard adjectives had gone out when the Fielding method of crisp oration and two hour budget speeches came in. It is true that sometimes the opposition yields to Tupper memories and Mr. Borden and Mr. Barker tear off two hundred and forty minutes of oratory, but in the main the opposition is seized of the new spirit and compresses its remarks within reasonable limits.

Now that Sir Hibbert Tupper is here, the House can hardly expect to escape a four hour monologue on the Grand Trunk Pacific. The member for Pictou has to make amends for a protracted absence; and, even if that were not the case, he would be constrained to it by force of habit and hereditary instinct. If this is anything more than a flying visit from Sir Hibbert, the session promises to be extended a month. But the chances are that he will be gone by the next week-end. He realizes that he is a political ghost haunting these glimpses of the moon, and it makes him feel uncanny. Not that he is ignored or slighted, but the respect that is paid him savors of the awe due to a spook un laid or a chieftain unburied. Tributes of esteem are tendered all the more freely because there is no danger of the man coming to life again. Sir Hibbert is highly spoken of by his party now that he is certain to take an active part in it. Of the dead nothing but good.

The member for Pictou would be deeply touched if he knew how inviolate his chair had been kept. If it had been draped in black cloth and burdened with funeral wreaths it could not have been more inviolate. The opposition seemed to feel the tragedy of that vacant seat—the splendid statesmanship they had banished, the powerful dynasty they had shaken hands with and dismissed. Nobody has spoken from that seat since Sir Hibbert last pressed his leather cushion. Back benches have edged up to the front row and have delivered their speeches from that vantage point. Jean Baptiste Morin has snuggled up behind Mr. Borden, and Haughton Lennox has been seen in a conspicuous position to his right, but the boldest invader of other men's seats turned tall when he came to Sir Hibbert's chair. Not that he feared bad luck; not that a curse of proximity goes with it; but simply because it was a dead man's seat and to that extent sacred ground.

Sir Hibbert, though politically decent, is, we are glad to say, physically quite fit. He is cleaning out his desk—a task which demands an usher and three pages, and is laying everything in ship-shape for his successor. He is renewing acquaintance with No. 6, and the members of the Conservative party, but the faces have grown out of his recollection and he has to be introduced over again. Absence pakes the heart grow fonder and the memory dimmer. It must have shocked Sir Hibbert the other day when Dr. Sproule, having been presented to him, said, scratching his chin thoughtfully the while, "Dear me! Where have I seen you before?"

Britain and Russia

Sir Charles Harding, the new British ambassador to Russia, arrived in St. Petersburg on Monday. Because of the part the ambassador is expected to play in carrying on King Edward's desire for closer relations between Great Britain and Russia, more than usual interest in his arrival was displayed in official and unofficial circles. The government was extremely punctilious in the ceremonies imposed by international etiquette on the arrival of the new ambassador.

So soon as the Emperor returns to St. Petersburg, Sir Charles Harding will present his credentials, and at the same time deliver a speech which it is expected will reveal, guarded of course, the object of his mission. The authorities there attach considerable importance to the prospective declaration with the ambassador's relations with King Edward. It will be regarded as being as much an expression of the views of His Majesty as those of the British government.

In official and diplomatic circles it is generally known that the establishment of better relations between Russia and Great Britain is the object of Sir Charles Harding's mission. The specific purpose, however, is still veiled, despite the discreet inquiries of foreign diplomats of their British colleagues there.

"You know as well as we do," said a well informed diplomat to the correspondent of the Associated Press to-day, "the intense personal desire of King Edward to reach an agreement with Russia. The King wishes to bring about a change in the Anglo-Russian relations such as realized by the agreement between Great Britain and France. In spite of the belief elsewhere this is a more difficult task than was accomplished in Paris and London. We believe Sir Charles Harding's mission is to reach an understanding with Russia, whereby will be defined the respective spheres of influence in Asia, just as the Anglo-French convention defined their respective spheres in Africa. There is no question of Great Britain formally offering intervention to arrange for

ACCIDENT AT CLOVER BAR

Mr. J. Barnes of Clover Bar was brought to the General hospital here on Thursday evening suffering from a badly fractured ankle. It appears that he had been driving a team and was thrown from the wagon, the front wheel passing over his right leg between the knee and ankle and crushing the bone badly.

It was found impossible to save the limb and it was amputated at the knee yesterday. The man is doing well.

Mr. Barnes has been a farmer at Clover Bar for many years and is well known throughout the district.

Nanaimo's Disastrous Fire

Haslam's saw and shingle mills at Nanaimo were totally destroyed by fire on Friday last. The loss includes machinery valued at $100,000. The insurance is only $25,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery. It took only an hour for the flames to convert the big mills into a heap of charred debris.

Before a single hose was turned on the fire, the whole establishment was a mass of flames.

Leaping high above the buildings were shooting tongues of flames, and higher above them again was a perfect cascade of rising and falling sparks, spreading in a golden shower all across the sky. It was impossible to save the building, though much time was lost locating hydrants.

The firemen, after a belated alarm was turned in, did grand work in saving Dobson's foundry and the sash and door factory. About one hundred men will be thrown out of employment. The nightwatchman's story is that he discovered fire in the shingle mill. He got a hose and tried to put it on, but found that the fire was gaining upon him, and so dropped the hose and ran to give the alarm. Chinamen were despatched to seek assistance and give the alarm in all quarters. The whole city was lit up by the reflected light of the flames at five minutes past two and at ten minutes past two the main building was a mass of flames from end to end. Some people think that the fire originated through a lighted match being dropped in the shingle mill.

BLAZE IN THE EAST END

The fire brigade were called out yesterday to extinguish a fire in a small stable in connection with Frazer's lumber yard on Eighth Street East.

Owing to the brigade not being at a distance from the hall the hose wagon was not taken out. A passing team was secured, however, and a team and the chemical engine rushed to the scene.

Two streams of water were quickly got on the burning building from the hydrant at the corner of Namayo Avenue and though the building was apparently gone when the brigade arrived the fire was extinguished, though the stable was practically demolished.

Very fortunately the wind was from the west and blew the flames away from the lumber piles which extended to within a few feet of the building on the sidewalk.

Had the wind been in the opposite direction the lumber would doubtless have caught and serious damage resulted.

WAR NOTES

The concentration of the Russian forces at Liao Yang will make that place the first line of defence and the first great battle probably will be fought there. No important aggressive action by this army is expected in the near future. Since the Russian fleet at Port Arthur has been bottled up the Japanese find it possible to safely use Antung as a base and to abandon most of the land transportation through Korea using the regular army transport equipment for conveying munitions from Antung to the front. The Chinese do not object to the Japanese occupation, because the new comers give employment to thousands at good wages and furnish a market for provisions & inflated prices. Many Japanese shopkeepers already are established there. The river has not yet been opened to foreign commerce.

Admiral Kataki reports that on the 15th the operation of removing the mines in Kerr Bay was continued by the torpedo boats under protection of a bombardment by the fleet. There is no change in the enemy's defense except the addition of two or three field guns to their position, which had the effect of interrupting the work of clearing the bay of the mines. Nevertheless, the Japanese destroyed eight mines, but there are many more left and the work of destroying them will be continued.

The London Times has the following from its correspondent with Kuroki's army: On the Yalu, May 8.—To-day I examined the trophies captured from the Russians. The field guns number 21, all of the latest pattern and dated 1901 and 1902. The total of 29 originally telegraphed is made up by the addition of eight Maxim's. There was also a great quantity of gun and rifle ammunition, a number of ammunition wagons, 2,600 rifles, saddlery, entrenchment tools, clothing and brass band instruments riddled by bullets. I visited the prisoners, who, by a strange irony of fate, are Poles from Warsaw taken at Hohmutang when covering the Russian retreatments. These in the hospital are most carefully tended, and their lodging is superior to that of the Japanese wounded. The Japanese guards fraternize with their charges and show an active sympathy, spending their microscopic pay in cigarettes for the prisoners. The Japanese are most scrupulous in all that relates to the usages of war. On their staff are two professors of international law from the University of Tokyo.

Two Russian officers have died of their wounds. The Japanese are utilizing their Manchurian crises and mutinies to a considerable extent. Grain is plentiful. The Chinese state that the Russians were perfectly orderly in this region. This coincides with the opinion expressed all along that on the Russian line of march their behavior was exemplary.

A horrid incident of the battle was given by a company of Japanese reserves in pursuit of the Russians. They arrived two hours before their comrades, and found themselves in the rear of the enemy. They were immediately attacked, but fought until one officer and but half the company were left. When their ammunition was exhausted, they fixed bayonets and prepared to charge, preferring death to surrender. The opportune arrival of the main body of reserves altered the situation.

Two gunboats, two torpedo boats and four other armed vessels assisted in the operations by demonstrations on the lower river from Yonampho. The movements of these vessels promoted the idea that it was the Japanese intention to cross the Yalu near Ningting.

The recent tendency to employ shrapnel in preference to common shells will be checked by the experience gained in the Yalu operations. Casualties from shell explosions were much greater to the number of projectiles fired than from shrapnel, and the value of a concentrated fire was demonstrated beyond cavil.

Shell explosions in the immediate vicinity, as compared with the distant bursting of shrapnel, is reported by Russian officers to have had a tremendous moral effect.

While the actual fighting imposed no great task upon the Japanese army, nothing can detract from the ability with which they planned the attack, resulting in the defeat, not of a comparative handful of the infantry, but of two divisions strongly posted. Every preliminary step contributed to the striking power of the Japanese forces, while it reduced the Russian hold on their points of vantage. The Japanese were completely prepared in case their attack failed.

The Russians had one great opportunity which they neglected. On the night of April 29 one division of the Japanese army was on one side of the river separated from the other two. Had the Russians kept a more tenacious hold on Tiger Hill they might have inflicted at that moment, a serious blow to the Japanese army.

What constitutes the greatest triumph for the Japanese is the fact that their tactics enabled them to defeat and practically rout an army of practically 20,000 men by attacking only one-quarter of their number.

A Montreal despatch says: Among the passengers on the transcontinental train leaving to-day are J. Yoriki, S. Kawamura and Yasaburu Fujita, three Japanese gentlemen who have been residents of New York some time. They are en route to Tokyo. They state that the Japanese colony in New York, which is quite extensive, has notified the authorities at Tokyo of their willingness to return and serve in active warfare if required. A company of 200 volunteers has already been formed and is actively drilling and preparing for an emergency. A large number of them saw service in the China-Japanese war and include several officers.

Killed By a Saw

The Echo, Pincher-Creek, records a bad accident, resulting in the death of the injured man, at the North Fork Saw Mills, on Wednesday last, when a man named Shipley was drawn into the saw. He was working as tall sawyer, removing slabs from the saw and had strict instructions from the head sawyer to clear away all slabs from out of reach of the saw, before lifting them. Instead of doing as ordered he was lifting a slab over the saw which was running full speed. The slab was an extra heavy one and touched the saw, the man was thrown off his feet and fell on the blade, the saw cutting his left arm completely off, and almost severing his left leg, making a diagonal cut down from just below the hip. The mill was stopped immediately, and the injured man rushed to the bunk house, where everything that could be done was done. A man was sent in for Dr. Townsend, but when he arrived at the mill the injured man had been dead seven hours. The deceased exhibited extraordinary vitality, as he lived for over seven hours after the accident, notwithstanding the enormous loss of blood, and recovered intelligently for an hour and a half; a most unusual thing, as the shock and loss of blood in such accidents usually results in death within a few minutes. Coroner Gould was notified of the death but the coroner's inquest decided that it was unnecessary to hold any inquest, as the deceased having acted directly contrary to the rules of the mill, and having often been warned not to take the slabs away in the manner through which he lost his life.

THE FIRST CONCRETE BUILDING

Dr. Gledenham has had one of his hollow concrete building block machines at work for some time at the corner of Keelestone avenue and Southwark streets where a residence of this material is being erected for Dr. McKay. The building will be completed in the course of a few days and will be the first concrete building erected in the town.

Two more machines are on hand and a yard will be opened next week at the corner of Fourth street and Saskatchewan avenue for the manufacture of the blocks. A larger machine is also in train, and when this is set up the combined capacity of the machines will be the equivalent of about 15,000 brick per day.

The blocks are made by what is called the semi-dry process. Just enough water is put on the cement to make it pliable. After molding the blocks are laid out to dry, being trenched once per day with water for a week when they are ready for use.

WIRELESS STATIONS

ON THE ST. LAWRENCE

Seven Stations to Be Erected for The Protection of Oceanic Navigation In The Gulf.

(Bulletin Special Dispatch).

Montreal, May 21st.—The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company have a contract with the Dominion Government by which they agree to establish seven stations in the mouth of the St. Lawrence, which will ensure the safety of all steamers coming into the St. Lawrence. By the contract all stations are to be completed by the opening of next season's navigation.

CAR SERVICE RULES

The Canadian Freight Association have issued the following circular regarding the detention of cars by shippers:-

The following extracts are culled from an address delivered by Mr. Asbury J. Elliott, a well known American authority:-

Car service rules are for the impartial enforcement of reasonable regulations in the loading and unloading of cars, so that the loss sustained where one shipper delays a car which another shipper needs, may be measurably equated.

The efficiency of car service depends upon the availability of cars. If a car capable of making six trips per month is delayed in loading, unloading or otherwise, so that it only makes three trips per month, its service to the public and to the transportation companies is reduced fifty per cent.

No reason is perceived in law or justice why unreasonable and unnecessary detention of cars by shippers or consignees should not be paid for.

The shipper, by his failure or neglect to unload or receive a cargo, compels the railway to retain, however long, the car which is entitled to compensation.

If cars can be indefinitely held up and converted into warehouses, it will take two or three times the number to accomplish the work of transportation, and the general public must eventually pay higher freight rates for the increased cost.

There are two mutually dependent parties to every shipping transaction: the railroads who are absolutely dependent upon the shippers for the business they handle, and the shippers who are as dependent upon the railroads to fulfil that business and whenever either party to such transaction undertakes to ignore the other, they perpetrate a wrong.

The shipping public must assume its share of responsibility for car service which is impossible without the co-operation of all interests.

Some shippers declare the rules are one-sided—that there should be reciprocity in the nature of a charge against the railroads when they fall against the carriers in unavoidable times. One important element is left out of this argument: the fact that the railroads earn their money by transportation from shipping point to destination; they do not profit by stopping a car after its destination, therefore a law or rule compelling to be done that is a natural incentive to do without computation, is absurd. On the other hand, it is not a natural incentive for patrons to unload a car promptly, but only when convenient. The element of time is therefore.

Railroads are not in the detention but the moving business. Cars, like blood, must circulate to maintain life in a railroad organization.

MACHINERY HERE

TO BORE FOR OIL

A Syndicate Will Test The Oil Deposits Of Athabasca—Several Others Interested in the Region.

Mr. A. von Hammerstein who has been well known in Edmonton and the north for many years came in from Winnipeg and other eastern points this week en route to the far north where he goes to test the oil deposits which for many years have been popularly believed to exist there. For almost a century Government and other scientific gentlemen who have been travelling through the north have from time to time reported the existence of reliable appearances of considerable deposits of coal oil in that country. The first recorded report on the matter is that of Sir John Richardson in the year 1823, and since that time many eminent government geologists have ventured the opinion that petroleum exists there in paying quantities.

Some years ago the government undertook experiments to ascertain whether these deposits really existed or not. Wells were bored at Pelican Rapids on the Athabasca and from one of these an immense flow of natural gas was secured. The operations were discontinued at a depth of about 800 feet.

Private enterprise however seems about to take up the search and several parties, including capitalists from the American side of the line are making a move toward exploring the region. One of the companies to do so, for one of the companies went into liquidation recently and the prospects are that before the season closes many others will have gone out.

Mr. A. von Hammerstein has been for many years interested in the symptoms of oil a considerable distance north of the Pelican rapids and now proposes to put his faith to the test. Many years ago while tracking through the country his attention was drawn to the larry station, a cairn in the ground, but only recently has he been able to take any step toward verifying his belief in its value. This he has done by having an analysis of the oil, which, as the substance was found to be made by several eminent chemists, including Mr. St. John of Minnesota and the reports of these gentlemen have been very satisfactory and have tallied with the analyses of the Government analysts. Last season he visited the region taking a small prospector and made a number of soundings and took samples from which he obtained the oil samples which have been tested.

A syndicate has been formed of prominent capitalists for the purpose of testing the deposits more thoroughly. As a large amount of machinery has been shipped to Edmonton some having already arrived, which will be taken out during the present summer and test wells sunk wherever the people appear best. The outfit includes four smaller drills, to be operated by hand, and a large drill capable of boring to a depth of 1,000 feet and operated by a twenty-two horse power engine. These will be taken to the Landing as soon as possible and up the river to the region to be prospected. The transportation of the machinery is a serious matter and little will probably be accomplished during the present season in the matter of actual boring. The syndicate are however prepared to expend a large amount of money if necessary to give the region a thorough test. The enterprise is to be regarded as a large one and involves a large amount of money, whether eventually successful or not. Should it be successful the intention of the syndicate is to pipe the oil over two hundred miles to the head of transportation, where it will be refined and shipped.

As soon as the machinery can be got to place, experts will be brought in from the oil fields of western Ontario and sent out to operate the drills for the remaining portion of the season. Mr. John H. Macmillan expects to get away for the north in the course of a few weeks with the machinery.

Influx to Prince Albert

Winnipeg Tribune:
"About 2,000 immigrants for points on the north half of the Prince Albert branch were transferred in exactly one week, from May 4 to May 11" said a traveller just arrived in the city from the north. "The congestion resulting from the freshet that tied up the Prince Albert branch of the C. P. R. gives the country an opportunity of learning the tremendous movement of Americans along that branch this spring. Practically none of these people pass through Winnipeg, in fact there is nothing in the way of reports or otherwise that would inform the people here definitely of the great movement to the Prince Albert country, in the Henley, Davidson, Deacon, Saskatoon and Battleford districts."

The settlers are coming into the country well equipped to begin their life in the Canadian Northwest as this blockhouse. Nearly three hundred cars of stock were held up at Lumsden and other stations along the branch when I left there last week. As soon as wheat seeding is finished in the States in a few days, there will be a greater movement still among the American farmers, who will come up, the farmers told me, to spy out the land.

The railway company is certainly doing the very best within its capabilities in reducing the congestion resulting from the tie-up on the branch. No men had complained of pay or condition, and they couldn't have accomplished their work better than did the combination of circumstances upon that branch about three weeks ago. Conditions arose that we may not experience again for fifty years. The trouble at Lumsden was more severe than at Saskatoon. For months the former town has been under water, until now the big elevators are beginning to careen, and the McNab structure in particular is at a striking angle. When the frost begins to leave the ground there is no doubt that the building will collapse from its foundations.

When I left the northwest the track north of Lumsden was under water at intervals for a distance of about four and half miles, and it was necessary to make two transfers the first by gasoline launch, and the second by flat cars, for a distance of one and a half miles. The whole valley is covered with water for the width of a mile to a depth of two or thirty feet. Fortunately the company had one train caught between Saskatoon and Lumsden at the time of the break, and this was used to advantage.

At Saskatoon, the transfer at the point in the South Saskatchewan where the big bridge was swept away was made by steam launch and cable ferry, which accommodates three teams at a time. Superficially the town is a picture of splendor, work well done, and car garages working and at Saskatoon one car 300 passengers and baggage were transferred in seventy minutes. There has been no suffering in the towns or north of Saskatoon for necessities, for the railway has given preference to those in all the stations.

"It is likely that the railway will not be running regularly before the end of the week. The pile bridge at Saskatoon will be ready, however, as soon as the Lumsden trouble is fixed up."

"Speeding is well under way on the north, nearly completed in fact, and the early sown wheat is about three inches above the ground."

"During the whole trouble in the northwest, the company has taken care of all passengers, their stock, men, and the patrons of the road after they had seen the actual conditions, have only praise for the officials."

Life in Port Arthur

Nemirovich Daneechenko, popularly known as the Russian Archibald Forbes, who is now in the service of the Associated Press, has just arrived at Liao Yang from Port Arthur and furnishes the following chronicle of the events of the first week of his investment of that fortress. "Danechenko escaped from the beleaguered city by the last train.

From Thursday, May 5th, the powerful fleet of the Japanese cruisers, the Asama, Asama, Iwami, Iwate and another, the name of which is unknown, together with the flag-ship Mikasa and battleship Matsukaze, also Yamato and the Taki remained constantly in sight at Port Arthur, departing every morning and returning at daylight. The Japanese torpedo boats occasionally sweep our coast with searchlights at night, and their barges lay in waiting off Piggy Bay beyond our vision on the western horizon and beneath the lofty hills that skirt the Liao Tung Gulf. Apparently the Japanese were watching to see if we intended to intercept them with their landing farther north.

Our communications with the outside were broken on Thursday and the following day the telegraph office in Port Arthur refused to accept our messages.

Japanese cavalry reconnoitred the peninsula from the north to ascertain whether we were safely impeded. But this fact did not cause particular impression in Port Arthur.

The weather was beautiful, a band was playing on the boulevard and there were many persons unconcernedly promenading the street. We heard the Japanese had fired on the last outgoing train carrying the Russian soldiers wounded and had succeeded in wounding and killing passengers. Rumor also floated in announcing the destruction of the railroad and the blowing up of some of the bridges, but our spirits remained timorously depressed. The military discipline and morale of the Japanese except a second class of Sustopolopol had never been cast off from its communication on the land side.

"We can die like our forefathers," was the universal sentiment expressed. The Chinese continued working as usual for the most part, very few of them attempting to escape. It seems that the sole defence of the Russian stronghold is General Konstantinov. He knows no rest, and is ceaseless in his activity. The ultimate victory will prevail throughout the fortifications and the energy displayed by every one, from highest to lowest is marvelous. No one is now admitted to Port Arthur. The women from Dalny, which was doomed to destruction, sought shelter here, but were not allowed to remain any longer than a few hours.

"The number of Chinese seeking work on the fortifications and as servants is more numerous than ever. As long as there is rice there will be Chinamen. The attitude of the Chinese authorities is changing, and among the Chinese here the titles are clearly our friends and the authorities clearly antagonistic. For instance, the governor of the province of Fuchow, northwest of us on the Liao Tung peninsula, has announced that he will behead all Chinese in his service who do not and that he will burn Wafanjin, one of the neighboring towns which has shown itself friendly to the Russians. After the skirmish at Wafanjin between the Japanese advance and the Russian guard, the governor excommunicated in the name of the servant of Lieutenant Holmer, the Russian military chief in charge of that section of the railroad.

Beyond Cape Terminal the Japanese are landing immense stores of rice and seige guns. The surrounding heights are occupied by Japanese, who have strung the railroad first between Sanshili and Polanien about fifty miles from here and blew up a section of the bridge with melinite."

Robertson hall on Wednesday evening.—Demas or "Men of the World" will be the subject of Pastor McDonald's address on Sunday evening at the Baptist church.—At the Methodist church tomorrow evening, Rev. C. H. Huestis will preach specially to men on the subject,

a rise in the water of the river has occurred and the ferry now crosses in good time without trouble.—Plans are being made for the accommodation of the enormous number of visitors who are expected to visit Winnipeg during the time of the fair.
It is rumored that several new buildings will be erected in the vicinity of the exhibition grounds, which will be particularly fitted up for the accommodation of visitors to the fair.—Regina Standard: Ex-Judge Richardson has gone to Milwaukee where he will spend some time before leaving for New Zealand. Mr. Richardson will spend some time travelling and will in all probability return to this city to permanently reside with his granddaughter, Mrs. C. H. Gordon.—Two men, supposed to be victims of smallpox, were recently sent from Souris to Brandon under instructions from a Souris doctor. As soon as it was discovered that the victims had all the symptoms of smallpox they were sent back to Souris. The Brandon city council placed the matter in the hands of a solicitor and intends prosecuting those responsible for sending the cases to Brandon.—Winnipeg Tribune: Situated just outside the city limits on the north, nestled close to the Red river among the trees, has recently sprung up a new village, which, unpolished, has rapidly grown into a place of quite large dimensions. All the residences are tents, or tent houses, and, while the inhabitants, as a rule, dwell here only during the warm months of the year, now few have remained during the cold winter months.—Dr. McIntyre has sold out his dental practice to Drs. Lowther and Robertson. Dr. Lowther has now been associated with Dr. McIntyre for several months. Dr. Robertson who is now on his way from the east, is

EDMONTON WINS

THE SECOND GAME

The Local Baseball Team Worsted the Strathcona Team Last Night By A Score Of 6 to 5.Edmonton won the second baseball match of the season with Strathcona last evening on the Hudson Bay Company's grounds. The game was only five innings, owing to the cloudy and threatening nature of the evening.
The teams lined up practically the same as in last Friday's game at Strathcona, except that Curry who pitched for Edmonton in the first game referred last night while Till did the work in the box, with Brown who held down first for Strathcona on Friday behind the bat for Edmonton.The game was a much better one than the first and showed the effect of more training but it was ragged in some particulars. To put it briefly Edmonton was strong in the battery and weak in the field, while Strathcona was exactly the reverse.Last night was Stokes' night off and the Edmonton batters got onto him from the start and never quit. Rossone was the first man to bat and he took the second ball which came along and put it under the sidewalk about two blocks away and took a home run in fairly easy time. The others followed suit and landed everywhere in the field. But their good batting brought comparatively poor results for the Strathcona fielders were out to gather in everything that came along.When the visitors came to bat the story changed. Their hits were few and far between but when they found a spot in the field it was usually unoccupied. For the first three innings, however, the battery held them down and at the end of the third only one run was chalked up to their credit. In the fourth however they pulled together in their batting and taking advantage of bad throwing from the field scored four more.Neither team got a man across the plate in the last innings, and the score stood 6 to 5 in Edmonton's favor.
